

ABSTRACT

The invention relates notably to a wireless corporate communication system comprising a private branch exchange, at least one base station coupled with the private branch exchange, and a plurality of corporate radio terminals under the range of the base station,

According to the invention, the corporate communication system comprises means for controlling the amount of resources allocated to each of the corporate radio terminals, the base station comprising means for indicating to the corporate radio terminals the amount of resources they are allocated.

103420 20020202